Download and. of individuals that could be included in recovery scenarios such as the illustration of a company having assets consisting of only a handful of items, some of which are expensive. Therefore, a method of distributing the costs in a manner that is desirable in the industry and as a practical matter would be very beneficial. [0038]In the following paragraphs, various facets of the invention are discussed. [0039]The first facet of the invention is a method of distributing a costly form of product such as an expensive product like an automobile, as well as a durable form of product that does not generate revenues for the producer, such as an expensive or durable form of construction material or a durable form of land. [0040]Distributing the costs would include an aspect of efficient distribution of the costs. An aspect of efficient distribution of the costs is the distribution of the costs in a manner that reduces the number of steps in the process of purchasing the product. [0041]For example, distribution of the costs may involve a single purchasing step in which the cost of a product is distributed to producers/retailers in a manner that is desired by the industry as a whole. The industry may desire that the purchasing step involve a large number of retail sellers or that it involve only a few sellers. [0042]Another aspect of efficient distribution is that the costs are distributed in a manner that efficiently uses existing resources. For example, if the purchasing step were done as a single
