Progressive group to spend M in ad campaign on Supreme Court vacancy
MORE's Twitter habits are "really nothing more than any other presidency." During an interview on CNN's "New Day," Conway told hosts John Berman and Alisyn Camerota that Trump is more comfortable tweeting out the "human side" of things. "He has the same voice on Twitter that he's had since 1987 when he was a candidate for the Reform Party," Conway said. "He's been this way for the last 25 years. It's the human side of him that he's speaking to. It's his voice. It's his rhythm." ADVERTISEMENT "So people who don't like him have a problem with his Twitter style, that's fine," she added. "If you don't like what he's tweeting, you're free to have an opinion." Conway's comment comes a day after she argued that the president is immune from legal scrutiny because he is the leader of the country. "We have to be careful what we wish for, because if you lose the authority to investigate, if you lose the due process... you can end up with a kangaroo court, a kangaroo trial in which you have the president of the United States on trial," Conway said in an interview with Fox News's "Fox & Friends." She added that Trump's supporters "want to make sure we go in there with a critical analysis and a critical eye, but also a critical judgment as to what is normal for a president of the United States, and is it time for a reset. Is it time for a reset?" The request came from California's agriculture commissioner, Tom Hannigan. His agency had requested that all Fresh and California Grown be named in a formal complaint to the United States Department of Agriculture, but a July 9 letter from the agency said there was no need for that, according to a copy obtained by
